

Japanese American Confinement Sites Consortium

Support the Preservation of Japanese American History for Future Generations!

Background

In 2006, the Japanese American Confinement Sites (JACS) Program was established for the preservation and interpretation of U.S. confinement sites where Japanese Americans were incarcerated during World War II. This original legislation was introduced by then Representative Bill Thomas, Doris Matsui, and Mike Honda.

Since the first year of funded projects in Fiscal Year 2009, 247 projects have been funded in 22 states and the District of Columbia with over 32 million dollars. Funding has ranged from as little as $5,000 to over $800 thousand for a single project. The program was originally funded with 38 million dollars, so the original funding amount will soon be exhausted.

Japanese American Confinement Education Act - H.R. 1931

Sponsored by Representative Doris Matsui (D-CA-6) the Japanese American Confinement Education (JACE) Act would permanently authorize the JACS Program with another $38 million dollars in funding authorization. With typical appropriations of $3 million per year, this would fund the program for an additional twelve years.

In addition to extending and strengthening the JACS Program, the JACE Act would establish a new educational program modeled after the recently passed Holocaust Education Act. An additional $10 million over five years would be used by a national museum to ensure that present and future generations of American will learn from the experience of Japanese American confinement, and our country's subsequent commitment to equal justice under law. Funding will be used for research and education relating to Japanese American incarceration, and the creation and disbursement of educational materials to promote better understanding of how and why Japanese Americans were incarcerated during WWII.
